The Jackson County Genealogical Resource Guide

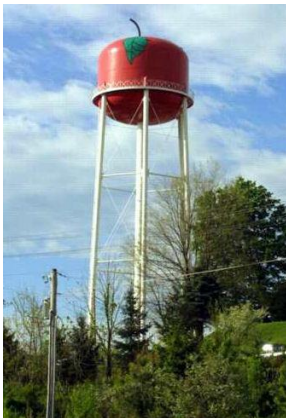

The Jackson County Chapter of the Ohio Genealogical Society, Inc., recognizing the needs of genealogists and historians, has assembled this 2008 special edition Resource Guide for those interested in Jackson County research.

Inside, you will find some preliminary information on the history of Jackson County; maps showing county boundary changes which occurred during the first half of the 19th century; information about local public records, organizations and libraries; addresses for useful web sites; and mailing addresses for all courthouses in Ohio.

We hope this information will prove valuable both for experienced researchers and beginners alike.

All web site links were tested and accurate, at press time. However, due to the nature of the internet, we realize such web site addresses do change. In order to keep this product up-to-date and thorough, we welcome notification of changes, additions, corrections and/or additional material for inclusion. ## COUNTY SEAT

Jackson

County History

Jackson County is located about 60 miles southeast of Columbus. The county is named in honor of Andrew Jackson.

The county was settled by the Welsh people and in the early days Welsh was the language commonly spoken here.

Established in 1795, the City of Jackson was one of the earliest settlements in the Northwest Territory. It was first named "Salt Lick Town" because the "Scioto Salt Licks" were located there. It was the location of the Scioto Salt Works, Ohio's first industry. Settlement did not begin here until September of 1795, after the Treaty of Greenville was signed. A community began to grow because of the need for salt. In a few short years, this influx of people formed a community. It was named Salt Lick Town.

Jackson, the county seat, was once the center of the nation's silvery iron industry. It now houses one of the country's largest manufacturers of food products.

Probate Judge has birth, marriage & probate records; County Health Department has death & burial records; Clerk of Courts has divorce & civil court records; County Recorder has land records.

Jackson County Boundary Changes

The following boundary changes have occurred over time for Jackson County, Ohio. The present-day boundaries of Jackson County are shown in black and boundaries at the time in question are shown in grey. Where boundaries were the same then as in the present, they are shown in the present-day black. All of the boundaries are shown on a map that contains present-day towns and features to enable you to better locate the boundaries. Knowledge of these changes may affect which county seat records for years in question are now located.

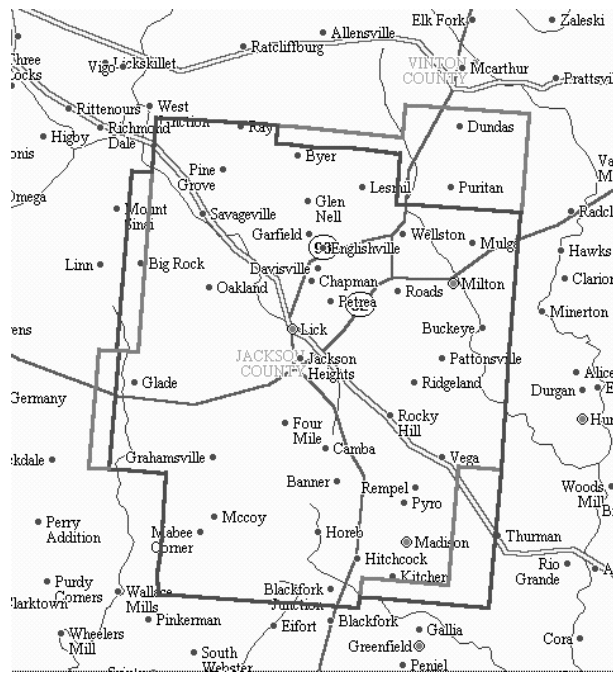

The following map shows the area that was later to become Jackson County as it existed in 1800.

The following map shows the area that was later to become Jackson County as it existed in 1810.
