WAR OF 1812 200TH ANNIVERSARY

In June of 1812, the United States declared war on Great Britain. As the western edge of civilization during this war, Ohio's residents found themselves defending their land against, both the Native Americans and British forces. Although Jackson County had not yet formed into a formal government, there were veterans who had fought that war, and would be a part of what would later become the county named after one of its war heroes. Jackson County, named for General Andrew Jackson, would organize on March 1st, 1816 from parts of Gallia, Athens, Ross and Scioto counties. Some of these noble veterans of the War of 1812 are listed inside the pages of this issue, along with a brief bio. To determine if your ancestor served in the War of 1812 check for those who lived in the area that were between the ages of 18 and 50, this war tended to accept a much larger age group for service, and men were in short supply in the frontier, so everyone was needed. Here are a couple of Ohio links to assist you in your search for "War of 1812" information:

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE

The following letter from our young friend H. C. Miller, late of this office, is confidential, but we are at liberty to make extracts; so we extract the whole of it.

Camp Chase, Columbus, O.
June 18th, 1862

D. Mackley, Editor Jackson Standard:

We have arrived safely, and are duly inspected and sworn into the service of Uncle Sam. I have always been of the opinion, and am more fully convinced that Uncle Sam is a good feller. He feeds and lodges us in grand style. Our Company has consolidated with a Company of "Yankees" from Darke County. We now number 90 men and are mustered into the 87th Regiment for general service. We were hard pressed to enter the State service, but obstinately refused. Our Company is organized. The following are our officers: Captain Charles Calkins; 1st Lieutenant, T. J. McDowell; 2nd Lieutenant, Geo. W. Johnson; Orderly, Ed Calkins. The Captain, 1st Lieutenant, and Orderly are from Darke County. Our Regiment has about 600 men, and will be uniformed this week. We will probably leave here for service in the course of a week or two. This letter is confidential, but you are at liberty to make such extracts as you see fit. Please send me the Standard at Camp Chase until otherwise ordered, in care of Capt. Calkins, Co. B, 87th Regiment. We have been assigned a good position in the Regiment. We are the left flanking Company.

Yours for the present,
H. Chesman Miller

DIED

Rev. Isaac Brown, at Pittsburg Landing, Tenn. on the 4th of May, 1862 of camp disease. Mr. Brown was born in the state of New York, June 14, 1801, and came to this county when a youth; and remained in this community until the Regiment in which he was a volunteer was ordered to the field of battle.

His long and expenry life as a citizen has built up for him a permanent and worthy character for truthfulness and fidelity. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1816, and was converted at a camp meeting held by Revs. Jacob Delay, Westlake and Page, a few miles east of Jackson, on the farm of Peter Bunn; and during this long period, forty-five years, he was always found at his post, taking an active and influential part in the Church of his choice. He has worthily filled the offices of Steward, Leader and Trustee in the church. He was licensed as a local preacher in 1837, and was serious, spirited and acceptable laborer in the relation, and many who are now living will long remember his strong and teaching appeals, but the strong, clear voice is stilled and hushed in death—we will hear it no more. May we profit by his example of devotion in God.

He left an aged widow, one son now in Pope's Division, one son here, two daughters and a large circle of friends and acquaintances to mourn their loss.

In him, the Church has lost a long-trying and firm friend and able supporter. Though he fell from home, on the field of battle among strangers, he maintained his Christian integrity to the last.

PR's editor's note: Isaac was the son of Nathan and Maraget (Simpson) Brown. He married Barsheba Darling on July 10, 1823. His father Nathan was a Revolutionary War patriot. Although Isaac was buried at Shiloh, a memorial marker has been placed in James Cemetery near where his wife lies buried.

POOR - Roberts Wesley, son of Joseph S. and Elizabeth Poor, was born September 12, 1866 and died April 13, 1897, aged 20 years and 7 months.

He joined the M.E. Church in January, 1877, in the eleventh year of his age, and lived a consistent Christian life to the time of his death. He was a kind and obedient son, and was loved and respected by all that knew him. He bore his affliction with great patience. His funeral was preached at Union Church by the writer, April 14th, to a large congregation of neighbors and friends. Robert rests from his labors and his works will follow him.

Monday – The funeral of John Price, Sr., who died Sunday night, took place this evening from the family residence, in Jamestown. Revs. Tedford and Rudisil conducted the services. There was a large turn-out of friends and a long line of carriages. The deceased had a wide range of acquaintance in this region, having resided in Jackson County some twenty-three years. He was about seventy-seven years of age at the time of his death, and had resided in Jackson some twenty-three years. For a time, he kept the old American House, corner of Broadway and Pearl Streets. Deceased was a quiet, pleasant gentleman and a good citizen. He raised a large family and had lived with his wife – who survives him- for fifty-three years. For the last few years the form of Mr. Price has been a familiar sight to persons passing along the road at the far side of Jamestown. As each funeral procession passed to the cemetery, Mr. Price was observed sitting upon his front porch, with a pleasant smile and a nod for everyone. It seems sad to think that the procession has at last started from his own door. He was ready to go. His work was done, and the tired, worn-out body laid down to that peaceful rest which earth cannot give. For years he had prepared his temporal affairs, and sat down by the bank of the river to await the call homeward. When it came at last, it found him ready.

Mr. John David was kicked in the face by one of his horses last Wednesday afternoon. He was turning them from one field to another when they rushed through the gate prancing and kicking at one another, and one striking Mr. David. Dr. Crumit was called and dressed the wound. Luckily the horse was “barefooted”, or serious might have been the result.

Mrs. Harriet Roberts died at the home of her son in Kahn's addition last Wednesday afternoon, after many months of painful affliction. Some time ago she became an invalid, not being able to walk at all. She was 82 years old. Her remains were interred at Pomeroy, from which place she came about three months previous. She was a grandmother of our townsman, Mr. Hugh Williams.

Fulton Furnace Destroyed!

And Johnny Martin is Destroyed
 In the Flames

About half past nine o'clock on last Wednesday night the whistle at Fulton Furnace sounded an alarm and there was a general rush in that direction. Almost simultaneously the fire bell rang, and in a very few moments the engine was speeding towards the flaming Furnace. Scarcely had the alarm been given until the flames were roaring clear to the top of the hoisting-house. The first was caused by the Furnace breaking through at the bottom. The volume of gas and fire rushed upward, igniting everything instantly. The hoisting-house and stock-house were soon a mass of flame, burning with wonderful rapidity. It was but a minute or two until the pot-house roof caught and all these buildings were destroyed. The Furnace boys had a pump and hose at work trying to save the engine-house and the fire-engine, throwing a strong stream was turned against the sheds covering the boilers, the fear being entertained that the great heat might explode the boilers. These building were soon made safe, and the Fire Company soon put out the burning frames, the hoisting-house having burned and fallen. The flames were all extinguished by midnight, except some coal that had caught in the stock-house.

It was known that Johnny Martin, the top-filler was on top at the time the fire broke out, and he was given up as lost, as no aid could possibly reach him. He had been seen by several persons to run around the top, as though trying to save himself, but had not gotten far until he fell, and perished. The heat was so intense that nothing could have lived for any length of time. After the flames had been so far subdued as to make it possible, an attempt was made to ascertain the fate of Martin. Ladders were secured and lashed together. These were placed against the stack and Lot Oliver ascended to the "apron" above.

He discovered the remains of Martin, just as most people supposed, on the opposite side from the where the flame first ascended. The body was burned into an unrecognizable mass, one hand burned off, and the limbs drawn up wonderfully. John Shanks and John Magoon next ascended, and the three men placed the body in a quilt and lowered it by means of a rope.

The deceased was a young man, and had not been married a great while, leaving a wife and one child. He married a daughter of 'Hiel Bruce. His brother and father stood by and saw the burning of the buildings, yet were powerless to aid him. In fact he was killed almost instantly. The loss to the Globe Company will not perhaps amount to more than eight thousand to ten thousand dollars. The worst feature aside from the loss of the man's life, is that the loss throws a large number of men out of employment at the Furnace and the mines.

MEMORIAL TO CAPTAIN ROBERT H. JONES

May 26, 1841 to April 26, 1912 marks the span of the earthly pilgrimage of Captain Robert H. Jones, Dean of the Jackson County Bar. He was born in Merionethshire, North Wales, and was the eldest son of Evan R. and Catherine (Hughes) Jones. In the fall of 1844 the parents with two small children left their native land and came to America, landing at New York.

In their search for a permanent location, the family touched at several towns in New York and northeastern Ohio, the most important being Akron and Youngstown reaching the latter place about 1846. During this period the father followed various occupations, principally farming, mining and labor on public works. In 1847, the father was employed as a miner at Briar Hill Coal Works, and then owned by David Tod who subsequently became Governor of Ohio and now underlying the business portion of the city of Youngstown. During the years 1848 and 1849 the son worked with his father in the mines. In 1849 the father became imbued with Wisconsin lead fever and removed with his family to Dodgeville in that state, but returned in about a month to Ohio, settling at a point directly opposite Girard, Pennsylvania. Here again the son engaged with his father in the mining of coal and also worked in the wire mills at Girard.

In 1851 the family removed to Lawrence County, Ohio, where the father purchased forty acres of land and engaged in farming. They remained there until 1854 when they again migrated to Wisconsin where the father bought a quarter section of land. They returned to Ohio, however, the same year. On the return trip the mother contracted cholera and died on board an Ohio River steamboat and was buried the same night on the Kentucky shore about 100 miles below Louisville.

By this time the family had grown to five and the father pressed onward with his motherless brood to Jackson County where he found foster homes for all save Robert, then a lad of thirteen years, whom he apprenticed to Joseph Rule of Oak Hill, to learn the trade of a saddler and harness maker. At the expiration of his apprenticeship in 1860, young Jones followed his trade as a journeyman saddler at Oak Hill, Ironton, Portsmouth and other points until the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion.

In response to President Lincoln's first call for 75,000 men for three months' service, he enlisted on April 19, 1861 as a private in Company a 18th Regiment he assisted in guarding the Baltimore and Ohio railroad between Parkersburg and Grafton and participated in the pursuit of Garnett's forces after the battle of Cheat river. His first term of enlistment having expired on August 28, 1861, he re-entered the service on September 12, 1861 as a private in the Fifth Independent Battery, Ohio Light Artillery, under General Andrew Hickenlooper, for three years. On October 13, 1863 he was discharged on account of physical disability and returned to his home.

His health having been restored he again re-entered the service on September 25, 1863 as Second Lieutenant of Company A, Fifth United States Colored Troops at Camp Delaware, Ohio, a service of extreme hazard, serving in actual duty in succession as 2nd and 1st Lieutenant, and afterwards as duly commissioned Captain in command of his Company about a year, until September 20, 1865, when he received his final discharge.

While with the Fifth Battery he participated in the battles of Pittsburgh Landing and Shiloh, and the advance on Corinth, Miss., stealing away from his hospital cot to join his command in the battle of Corinth in October 1862. In the battle of Shiloh his horse was shot from under him. During his service with the Fifth U. S. Colored Troops, he participated in the raid from Norfolk to Elizabeth City, N. C., the siege and battle of May 15, 1864, in front of Petersburg; the battle of Bermuda Hundreds and Deep Bottom; the assault of Fort Gilmore; the battle of Chapin's Farm and Newmarket Heights; both Fort Fisher expeditions and the marches to Wilmington and Raleigh, N. C.

Captain Jones' early education was limited to ten weeks schooling while his later extensive knowledge and learning was acquired by his own persevering efforts and by diligent application to books after his daily work was completed. Midnight always found him at his studies. His books were purchased with money earned by running errands for the journeymen saddlers who worked in the shops where he served as an apprentice.

In 1860 he had commenced the study of law under Colonel Oscar F. Moore of Portsmouth but ceased it when he responded to his country's call. While following his trade after the close of the war he again took up the study of law and registered in 1868 under James Tripp, later Common Pleas Judge of this district. He was admitted to the Bar in April 1872 at Portsmouth, but continued at his trade until April 1873, when he began the active practice of law before the courts of Jackson county, his home and office being at Oak Hill. He remained there until April 1883, when he removed to Jackson, where he forged to the front as one of the leading lawyers of the county, enjoying a large practice and was particularly successful in criminal practice, being engaged in nearly all the important criminal cases in the county for more than twenty five years, in addition to an extensive clientele in civil matters. During the last six years he has been associated in practice with his youngest son, Charles H. Jones and continued actively in the harness in the office and before the courts until two weeks prior to his death when he was forced to his bed with an acute disorder of the liver. At the time of his demise he was president of the Jackson County Bar Association.

He was a lifelong, active and influential Republican and often represented his party as a delegate to District and State conventions, and only recently placed in nomination as an Alternate Delegate from the 10th Ohio Congressional District to the coming Republican National Convention at Chicago.

His career of public trust embraced several terms as Justice of the Peace at Oak Hill, two terms in the Ohio Legislature as Representative from Jackson from 1882 to 1885 and City Solicitor of Jackson. As a Legislator he was interested especially in all matters affecting labor, being the author of the labor lien law and perfecting the law against the payment of the wages of labor in store goods or scrip, as well as other matters of public interest. The turmoil caused in the locality and the responsibility for the safety of prisoners convicted of capital offenses and the abhorrent scenes of the curious and howling mob surrounding and attending the double executions of Luke and Bill Jones at Jackson in February 1884, for the murder of farmer Lackey, produced such an impression on his mind that forthwith on the night following he conceived and drafted the original measure for the removal of all future executions from the Counties to the State Penitentiary and shortly afterwards he introduced the Bill in the Ohio legislature. While a member of the House he was on the Committee that located and established the Ohio Reformatory at Mansfield, and gave his active support for the first state appropriation made for the Ohio State University.

His temperament led him to be a successful defender of men charged with crime. He was a zealous and hard fighter but always a fair adversary. As a lawyer and a public man he was eminently sincere, a man without pretense, hypocrisy or deceit and was simply incapable of petty meanness. It is a common saying that "you can always know where R. H. stands" for in civil life as an advocate in the halls of legislation and in the Courts as in all his years of active army service, he was always "on the firing line". A hearty and earnest friend and an open manly opponent; he had the respect of all, even of those who disagreed with him for he stood upon honest conviction while giving due respect to the convictions of others. His feelings and sympathies always went with the weak rather than the strong, and as a man as well as a lawyer he always gave any one the benefit of any doubt.

As a trial lawyer he stood easily among the leaders of his Bar. In his presentation of facts in the argument of causes before juries he was eloquent, forceful and persuasive, and many a case was won by him in the argument which seemed doubtful and hopeless in the evidence.

He was endowed with quick perception, tireless energy and steadfast fidelity to the cause of his client, and could not be swayed by any improper influences. His professional brethren regarded his promise with implicit confidence and he always kept the faith with his client, with his fellows and with the Court. His chief characteristics were industry, loyalty and perseverance and less constituted the grand trinity of his power. He had faith in the integrity of the Courts. He believed in their ability to determine justly and legally all conflicting claims and interests. He was true at all times to the old school ethics of his profession.

Captain Jones was married on April 28th, 1868 to Miss Marie S. Hanna, of Jackson, who is left to survive him with six children; Charles H. Jones and Mrs. James Carrigan of Jackson; Miss Jane Jones of Hillsboro, Mrs. S. E. Hanna, Arthur H. Jones and Robert H. Jones of Columbus.

The Jackson County Bar, with whom he has been in constant active practice for forty years, will miss the brave unselfish soldier, the kind manly gentleman and professional friend, and will feel his death as a personal loss, and express to his grief stricken wife and family our profound sympathy in their bereavement, and the Bench and Bar will honor itself by setting aside a page of the Journal and Record of the Court dedicated to his memory.

JACKSON PAYS THE LAST HONORS TO HER MOST WIDELY KNOWN SON

The Funeral of Morris L. Sternberger Held Wednesday, June 5, And All The Business Houses Closed

The death of Morris L. Sternberger, Jackson's wealthiest man and most widely known citizen occurred Sunday afternoon, June 2, at his home in this city.

He had been in failing health for many months, but his powerful physique and an indomitable will, enabled him to survive the ravaged of disease, much beyond the usual records in cases of diabetes.

Up to ninety days ago, he continued to look after his many and varied interests and spent the later winter months in Florida, where he planned new investments.

It was while in Florida, that the last warnings came and he hastened home to set his house in order to await the inevitable. Operations were performed to stay the progress of the disease and he rallied from time to time, but the end was now in sight.

In his last days, he thought of many others, notwithstanding his own sufferings and the generous deeds authorized by him helped to make life brighter for them. Some of them may never know who their benefactor was.

Those deeds were largely private and unknown to the general public, but his benefaction to the Public Schools could not be hidden and it was heralded throughout the land. It was a most generous and striking act to give a month's schooling to all the children of Jackson, below the High School, and the incident can never be forgotten by any of them.

The funeral cortege then proceeded to Fairmount where the casket was placed in a vault until the mausoleum planned is ready for it. It was on a warm sunny June day and amid the sweet odors of many flowers and surrounded by a great number of friends that the remains of M. L. Sternberger arrived at the end of the journey.

The honorary pall bearers were Justus Collins, C. H. Hinsch, Eugene Zimmerman and John Sargent of Cincinnati, Frank Brandon of Lebanon, Judge J. W. Bannon of Portsmouth, H. S. Willard of Wellston and Dr. S. B. Hiner of Lima. Mr. Zimmerman and several of the other had been intimately associated in business for many years and Dr. Hiner had been in constant attendance for several months.

The pall bearers were H. C. Murfin of Portsmouth, Joseph McGhee of Columbus, Henry Willard of Wellston, George Shade of Sandusky and George Wheldon, D. J. Herbert, W. C. Martin and Ed Horton of Jackson Murfin was for many years a resident of this city and was a faithful employee of the Superior Coal Co. The others were associates and close friends.

Morris Lee Sternberger was the son of Moses and Elizabeth (Stephenson) Sternberger and was born February 9, 1856

The father was the son of Samuel and Caroline Sternberger of Bavaria in Germany and was born August 29, 1826.

He came to America in 1839 and settled in Jackson in 1845. He was married in 1850 to Miss Elizabeth Stephenson, a member of perhaps the most numerous family in the county whose founder came from North Carolina in the early days of the Scioto Salt works.

Jackson was a very small village in the fifties and Mr. and Mrs. Sternberger played an important part in its life. The husband who had begun life with nothing was rapidly acquiring a competency and the wife was one of the leaders in the social and church life of the town.

An old record of the Presbyterian Church shows that both were members in 1862 when Morris L. was six years old. That church was very weak in those days and their work helped it to survive the great storm which threatened it during the war.

The mother lived until 1878. The father lived on into a ripe old age became one of the wealthy men of the county and saw his sons established successfully in various lines of business.

Young Sternberger received his early training in the Jackson schools of the period, but he was five years old when the War began, at that age when the varied experiences of the period matured so many far beyond their years.

It is experience not years that counts in the development of the intellect, and Sternberger was ready to enter business while still young and made a success of his career from the beginning.

Living near him, many of his townsmen were unable to know him as he was, but abroad, he towered among his business associates and now that he is gone, even Jackson people may begin to discern his elements of greatness.

STANDARD-JOURNAL, JACKSON, OHIO WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 14, 1914 REFLECTIONS OF W. F. YERIAN

Looking through my notes, I found some interesting reminiscences related about a year ago by William F. Yerian, who was born in Licking county and will be eighty years old about March 28. His father, Daniel Yerian came from Licking county to this country in 1844, and for a few years the family rented land from George Walterhouse, the owners of the Hippel farm near Coalton and of the J. E. Ferree land. But about 1850, Daniel Yerian bought the farm on Rock Run where he lived until 1864, and where his children grew up, among them W. F. Yerian who is still a resident of Liberty. He recalls that Wild Turkeys were to be found on Rock Run at that time and he saw three flying across from hill to hill in 1851. He also saw deer near his home in 1852. Rattlesnakes were plentiful in the neighborhood, and he had quite an experience with an old one on a Sunday afternoon, when he climbed the rocks in quest of Huckleberries. He found a flat rock, with projection and his dogs discovered the snake under the shelf. He went for his ax, cut a notch in the rock, cut a pole about 10 feet long, and teased the snake, until it came out and was killed. It had nine rattles and a button, and full of young. This was one of the Rattlers that he saw, but there was no end to the Blacksnakes and they are there yet. Yerian does not recall that any one was bitten by a Rattler, but Miss Martha McCune was bitten by a Viper. Hogs were allowed run at large in those days, and they exterminated nearly all the snakes except those in the rocks. It was while living on this Rock Run Farm that he found the pieces of lead which attracted much attention at the time. This also occurred on a Sunday. His parents had gone to church at Pine school house and he and two sisters went down to the Run to search for pretty pebbles in the riffle, when he saw a bright lump in the shape of a cube, about 3/4 inches to a side. They searched awhile longer and two smaller cubes were found. These were brought to town to John Hatten and he melted the two small pieces and ran them into lead. Yerian bought the farm where he now lived about 1869, and he thinks that Ravens nested in the township perhaps as late as 1870. Has anyone seen Ravens later, in this county than that date?

The country was never dull in those days, for something was happening all the time and there was no end of social and sporting events, not the least of which was the circular Fox hunt. Yerian remembers a Fox drive held in 1859. The closing in occurred at the Shaffer farm, and two Foxes were captured. Possibly John McCartney and N. B. Wood remember this drive. Among the pioneers of Liberty were the two Davises, Peter and Adam, who were shoemakers, but who knew also how to manufacture Saltpetre in some of the caves along the Run. Yerian and some boys found one cave, where the Davises had been making Saltpetre and discovered pieces of the bowls of ladles made out of clay, which they had used. This cave was on the Dowell farm. I have heard from others that Adam Davis knew where there was a deposit of lead, but he never revealed the secret to any one, and took it with him when he died.

JACKSON HERALD, JACKSON, OHIO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1929

Wm. F. Yerian, Veteran, Dead - Served in Civil War, Marched With Sherman To The Sea.

After serving his country through the Civil War for nearly four years and returning to serve his country in peace as he had served in war, William F. Yerian died Tuesday evening at his home in Liberty township lacking three months of reaching his 95th birthday anniversary. He was a fine soldier and marched with Sherman from Atlanta to the Sea participating in many of the hard battles which men who follow that intrepid campaign experienced. He served the 47th O.V.I. and those who know that regiment will know the kind of service he saw for his county. He was a member of the Francis Smith Post G.A.R. and enjoyed attending the meetings when he was able. For several months he has been in very feeble health and gradually succumbed largely to the encroachment of age.

He is survived by five children Joseph, of Bishop, Calif., Mrs. Bernard Timlin, Haberston, Mich; Albert Harper, Frank and Ed Yerian all being at Liberty township. He was a brother to Ash Yerian of Wellston and another brother Isaac lives at West Liberty. The burial was Friday afternoon with Clyde Mayhew in charge and Rev. Mr. R. White conducted the funeral services. Interment was in Pleasant Grove Cemetery.

- Kroger Community Reward Program – It is once again time to re-enroll in the Kroger Community Reward Program. For those have done this in the past, we greatly appreciate your help. Those who have not joined, but would like to do so, please go to www.krogercommunityrewards.com, click on "OHIO" and click on "Enroll". Type in JCOGS in the search box when designating an organization. Kroger will donate funds from what you purchase at Kroger to the JCOGS.

- James Cemetery – This Spring our own ladies of the JCOGS planted flowers at the cemetery. Donna Scurlock donated the flowers and Cynthia Dalton along with Donna planted flowers around the base of the flagpole and the base of the historical marker. Anthony Coyan announced the plans for purchasing more fencing and the need for volunteer help to erect the section of fence once it arrives.

Cynthia Dalton stands in front of the James Cemetery flagpole after the planting of flowers donated by Donna Scurlock.

- Coalton High School Yearbooks – We are now offering some Coalton High School Yearbooks on CD (in word searchable PDF format) and 8 1/2" x 11" softbound book. Currently we have the years 1946, 1947, 1950 and 1951. These are for sale for $10 each for the CD version and $15 for the softbound book. Go to our website (www.jacksoncountyohiogen.com) and print off a publication form (or use the one provided in this issue of PR), select which years that are desired and mail it in.

Chapter Information

Poplar Row is a copyrighted publication issued quarterly by the Jackson County Chapter of the Ohio Genealogical Society. If you would like to share information via our newsletter, please feel free to submit your article, story, family group sheet, query or helpful research information to the Chapter for publication in future editions as time and space permit.

Members and the public are encouraged to submit copies of five-generation charts. These will be included in Poplar Row, in a three-ring binder at the Jackson City Library, and available for research purposes, unless otherwise requested or specified.

As our membership form indicates, we request permission to print members' names and contact information, unless submitting members request this information not be shared. We do not share such information with any commercial enterprise.

The Jackson County OGS meets the second Saturday of each month at 10:30 a.m. in the Potter Room at the Jackson City Library, 21 Broadway St., Jackson, OH 45640.
